LEGISLATURE WORKS ON BUDGET MONEY

State University Makes Hard
Fight For More Money—
Senate Works Saturday

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 25.—The House of Representatives spent Friday considering the budget appropriation bill for 1922-23, and adjourned until Monday before taking action on the University of Kentucky appropriation. The Senate, by a vote of 19 to 17, refused to adjourn until Monday, and will be in session Saturday.

Most of Friday afternoon was spent by the Senate in arguing points raised by an effort to determine that a majority of those present could take charge, despite the rules committee, all of which were beaten. This parliamentary sparring was preliminary to passage of House bill 51, which provides for the separation of men and women jurors, and was occasioned by an effort on part of Senator Ben T. Davis to defeat this measure, on legal grounds, relative to the upholding of jury verdicts.

In the House, the appropriation for the State Board of Health, was pared $20,000 or from $70,000 to $50,000, on motion of Representative G. L. Drury, of Union county, in the afternoon, though in the morning the reduction had been defeated 32 to 31, when it was suggested to cut it to $35,000.

The House voted by a heavy majority for the Kentucky Normal and Industrial Institute $100,000 more on the year, which raises the budget allowance from $30,000 to $40,000, and is an increase of $15,000 over what the negro institute received last year.

An increase of $9,000 was voted to the Kentucky Institute for the Blind at Louisville.

When adjournment was taken the amendment proposed by A. L. Hamilton, representative from Fayette county, and ably supported by Harry Miller, of Lexington, to increase the University of Kentucky appropriation $75,000 over the sum indicated in the budget, was pending, with every indication of its being adopted by the House.

In the Senate, when an appeal was taken from the ruling of the chair on postponement until Monday of House bill 51, dividing the jurors, Senator Davis and all of the republicans, except Senator Stoll, voted against the appeal, the other democrats voting with the Lexington senator for it, the appeal being sustained.

While some of the observers thought that the various appeals taken from the decision of the chair and the rules committee were preliminary moves on the road toward the final fight, there is no real reason so to class them.

There is a tremendous interest in Senate bill 195, which is designed to prevent trust companies at Louisville from writing policies of fire insurance, opposition from out in the state being in evidence on the ground that eventually the bill, if passed, would extend to banks throughout the commonwealth. This bill was not far down the list in the orders of the day when adjournment was taken.

Senator Davis wanted the Senate to recess until Monday at one o'clock, which was the first motion. This was defeated. Some of the senator who voted with Mr. Davis against House bill 51, were against him in his various parliamentary moves for delay on the matter, Lieut. Gov. Ballard ruling that a recess could be taken, and is was on the appeal from such ruling that the chair overruled the contention of the rules committee sustained.

After the Senate adjourned, the committee on rules met and considered Senate bill 206, which is designed to prevent carbon black companies from using natural gas within 10 miles of a community using gas, or the pipe line of a natural gas company. This was described as a conservation measure, and was defended by E. L. McDonald, of Lexington, of the Swiss Oil Company; Donald McDonald, of Louisville, president of the Louisville Gas and Electric Company, and others. A letter from Desha Breckinridge, editor of the Lexington Herald, upholding the bill as a conservation measure, also was read to the committee.

A. C. Koonz, of Charleston, W. Va., appeared for the carbon black company. He said there are now two such companies in Kentucky. He said that there now is a daily open flow of natural gas in Kentucky of 250,000,000 cubic feet, and that 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 cubic feet is all the quantity used in the manufacture of lampblack.

Those favoring the bill said that the making of carbon black was the most wasteful process of using natural gas.

Those favoring the bill said that Kentucky is threatened with an influx of carbon black companies, and that such companies are being legislated out of other states. They said that West Virginia is trying to dominate the natural gas situation and prices, and that West Virginia natural gas interests are opposing any would conserve the supply in this state, the existence and use of which act as a bar to an inflated price for the West Virginia product.

Opponents of the measure contended that provisions should be made for the purchase of all natural gas within the 10-mile radius of a pipe line or community of 5,000 population using natural gas.

The membership of the state highway board, to supersede the present commission, suggested by the democratic senate caucus would be composed of General W. L. Sibert, of Bowling Green; L. B. Samuels, of Bardonia; Mark L. Conley, of Cammel City, and Ben Weille, of Paducah.

Whether or not such an amendment would be acceptable to the House is a question. There is every reason to believe that the House bill will be reported out in the senate early next week and brought to an issue. Whether this is done voluntarily by the rules committee, or whether it will be necessary to invoke the rule of 20 senators superseding power of that committee, will be determined by developments.

Of course, the House has the power to veto amendments offered by the senate. In case the House refuses to concur in senate recommendations, the bill would go to a conference committee, and it would be a question of which house yielded first. For this reason, real friends of the bonds are hopeful that the whole matter will be threshed out as early as possible, and not put off till the final days of the session, when hasty action would be necessary.

Gov. Morrow Friday signed the House bill of Representative Emory L. Frazier to create a Kentucky former service men's board. The board is to be composed of three members, two of whom are to be the adjutant general and the head of the American Legion in Kentucky, who at present is Emmett O'Neal, of Louisville. Adjutant General Jackson Morris and Commander O'Neal will meet in Louisville Monday to name the third member and select a secretary. The state pays the expenses of the board, which is created to look after the claims of disabled war veterans.

Bills introduced in the House Friday follow, all going to the rules committee:

H. B. 433—H. J. Meyers, Covington, requiring motion picture theatres to use fireproof roll containers.

H. B. 434—H. C. Dixon, Daviess, amending law for suppression of communicable diseases among livestock.

H. B. 435—A. L. Hamilton, Fayette, prescribing methods of making up tax sales.

H. B. 436—S. A. Carv, Cumberland, making Middlesboro, Guthrie and Fulton state highway centers.

H. B. 437—A. L. Hamilton, Fayette, forbidding use of the flag for advertisements.

H. B. 438—A. L. Hamilton, Fayette, making bass fishing illegal from April 20 to June 1.

H. B. 439—F. L. Strange, Bowling Green, providing a 5 cents a ton tax on all coal produced.

H. B. 440—Wm. Boling, Meade, fixing tax of 1 per cent on value of all coal produced in state.

H. B. 441—G. G. Dixon, Daviess, authorizing special plan banks.

H. B. 442—A. L. Hamilton, Fayette, amending inheritance tax law lowering exemption from $25,000 to $10,000.

H. B. 443—Henry Lawrence, Trigg, making Eddyville-Cadiz-Tennessee road a state highway project.

TO SURVEY ROAD TO M'KEE EARLY IN MARCH

State Road Department Promises
Early Co-operation In Work
On Needed Highway

Prospects for building the highway from Richmond to McKee, county seat of Jackson county, grow brighter right along.

Delegations from Madison and Jackson counties went before the State Road Commission at Frankfort Friday. State Engineer Joe S. Boggs proposed to have a corps of engineers make a preliminary survey and estimates of the cost of construction early in March. Jackson county has already pledged about $40,000 for this road, and the Madison fiscal court made a liberal appropriation for her part. Most of the construction work is required in Jackson county. Madison's part mainly is the building of a passable road up the Big Hill. Of course, there is pretense of a road up the hill and has been for many years but it is dangerous at all times and often is impassable in bad weather.

A properly constructed road up the Big Hill would prove one of the most attractive and scenic highways in this section. And after Big Hill is completed, and the road built to McKee, a vast territory is opened up, for which this highway will be the logical and most convenient outlet.

The Jackson county men who went to Frankfort to press the matter upon the State Road Commission were County Judge Carter Moore, County Clerk John Fowler, and County Agricultural Agent W. R. Reynolds. They were accompanied from Richmond by County Road Engineer J. G. Baxter and Dr. D. J. Williams.

MADISON WINS FROM LEXINGTON AGAIN

Madison Hi won its second game of the season from Lexington Model Hi Friday night at the University of Kentucky gym in Lexington by a score of 25 to 23. The Madison team held the Model five to a 25 to 12 score until the last five minutes of play. Then Coach Lassiter sent in the second string men. Model then came within two points of the Madison lead. The game was rather slow, but the Madison boys revived their line pass work and rode through in high gear. Leach led the Lexington attack against the locals in the last few minutes of play. The same team started against Model that has started the last few games. Lexington started off in the lead by shooting a field goal. The locals soon tied the score and established a lead that the Model five could not overcome. The score at the end of the first half was 10 to 9 in the locals' favor. Talcott Stone played well for Madison. The lineup:

Madison: T. Stone, (13) rf; Clouse (4) lf; E. Stone (6) c; Hurst (2) rg; Reeves lg.

Model: Hopkins (8) rf; Reynolds (5) lf; Leach (10) c; Smith rg; Mandt lg.

Substitutes for Madison: Genter, H. Stone, Blevins, Allman, Hugely.

Wanted A Tag For His Little "Boy Dog"

U. S. STARTS WORK TO PREVENT COAL STRIKE

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Feb. 25.—Secretary of Labor Davis has under way today action contemplated by a conference of the bituminous coal operators and miners prior to April 1, when the contracts in the union field expire. A failure to negotiate a new agreement is regarded as a likely cause of a nation-wide strike.

While government officials are disposed to maintain silence on the ground that publicity might injure the desired progress, it is understood appeals are being sent to individual companies and operators in different states, asking them to meet with the committee of the United Mine Workers which is authorized to deal with the unions. The government maintains existing wage contracts bind the mine operators to consider with the unions the question of writing a new national agreement but those close to the situation are not sanguine, a conference even if successfully assembled, would avert the strike. The operators were said to be determined to force a wage reduction while the miners stand for maintenance of the present wage scale, six hours a day and a five day week.

FOUR POWER TREATY FAVORABLY REPORTED

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Feb. 25.—The four power treaty with its supplements, and the naval limitation and submarine treaties, was ordered favorably reported today by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. A reservation declaring nothing in the treaty shall be construed as forming an "alliance" was approved 1 to 3. Senators Borah, Johnson and Shield casting the negative votes. The vote against the four power treaty but voted for the naval limitation and submarine treaties making the vote unanimous.

FARM PAPER EDITOR SPEAKS AT NORMA

An enthusiastic reception was accorded James Speed, editor of the Southern Agriculturist, a chapel exercise at the Norma Saturday morning. Mr. Speed is an old friend of the student body as he usually comes to chat with the young men and women at least once each year.

Naturally his audience expected a talk on the out-of-doors as he gave his talk "Keep Your Eyes Open," earlier this winter. His topic this morning, however, was a complete surprise being "Chins Up," a short inspirational talk. In opening his address, the lecturer drew a rapid but vivid picture of the George Washington at Mt. Vernon, who was the most scientific and farsighted farmer in America.

"Washington," Mr. Speed explained, "although ordinarily spoken of as first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen, was in his own heart of hearts a farmer first and last and always. He idealized farming, and was content to spend his later years as tiller of the soil."

Using Washington as an example of the man who idealized his job, Mr. Speed made the statement that the drift of the farmers and their families to the cities was not because of the bright lights, the jazz music and entertainment; but because life on the farm had never been equalized.

"Whoever heard a farmer tell his son that farming was a profession or that it was anything but a dirty, mean job?" asked the speaker. "At the same time physicians, nurses, dentists, actors and artists have idealized their jobs no matter how hard and dirty and mean they are."

Friday afternoon, Mr. Speed talked to several classes at regular periods and to the new department of community civics at eleven o'clock.

PIERCY TO FIGHT FOR POSTPONEMENT

Is Report On Eve of Calling of Interesting Trial In Court

Trial of Lawrence Piercy, of Lexington, charged with abducting and attempting to kill Peter W. Wells, on the night of last December 2, will be called in the Madison circuit court Monday morning. Piercy is in jail here and has been confined since his examining trial, being unable to give the $30,000 bond placed upon him.

Reports have it that strenuous efforts are to be made by Piercy and his counsel to secure postponement of the trial to the May term of court. His attorney, Harry Miller, of Lexington, is a member of the State Legislature now in session at Frankfort, and it is said will plead that as cause for postponement of the trial. A number of men have telephoned here telling of the necessity of having Mr. Miller on the ground during the closing days of the legislative session at Frankfort, and urging this as grounds for postponement. It has been pointed out, however, that Mr. Miller was a member of the legislature at the time he accepted employment as Piercy's counsel and knew that the next term of court here would fall at a time while the legislature was in session.

Another report has it that effort may be made to secure change of venue from Madison county. Grounds for such a motion would naturally be that Piercy could not obtain a fair trial of his case here. However, it is not expected that such a plea would carry much weight. Those who now conditions here, know that there is no sentiment to give Piercy anything but the fairest of trials; there is no mob sentiment whatever, it is pointed out, and no prejudice against Piercy. No one wants him to obtain other than even and exact justice, so far as the Daily Register has been able to gauge sentiment. There is much interest in the case, of course, presenting as it does so many mysterious and unusual features. But it is agreed on all sides that Piercy can secure as fair a trial here as he could anywhere in the world.

BOAT IS OVERTURNED IN SWOLLEN RIVER

Irvine, Ky., Feb. 25.—While attempting to cross the Kentucky river, which is at flood stage here, Charles Curd was overturned by the swift current. He was washed down stream and lodged on a swinging limb of a tree. He clung to the limb an hour calling for help. Prof. C. W. Campbell, principal of the Irvine high school hearing his call, effected a rescue. Curd was taken to his home suffering from exposure.

A petition is being circulated requesting County Judge C. G. Sprout to call an election May 13, to vote a bond issue of $275,000 for building roads in Estill county.

In Judge Sprout's court this week, Forrest Tipton and Hoodie Vanderpool were held to the grand jury under bond on charge of having liquor in their possession. Dave Short was fined $30 and sentenced to 10 days in jail on a charge of drunkenness. Jas. Owens was fined $20 on a similar charge. Warrants were issued for four persons, charging them with selling liquor.

Lewis Snowden and Miss Maude White, of West Irvine, were married here Friday by Rev. H. T. Bonny, pastor of the Methodist church.

Thad Bashan, 17, farmer, and Miss Rosa Warford, were married here. Both live at Jenkins.

Ray Sherrard, 22, and Miss Myra Peters, 18, both of Ravenscroft, were married at the Methodist church here by Rev. H. T. Bonny. They left for New Orleans and other points south before returning to their home at Ravenscroft.

FRENCH BLUEBEARD REFUSES TO CONFESS

(By Associated Press)

Versailles, France, Feb. 25.—Mysterious until death, Henri Landru, the bluebeard of Gambais, convicted of the murder of ten women and one youth, was guillotined at 6:05 o'clock this morning.

"Had I any confession to make," he told the priest, "I would have made it long ago." He refused the sacrament and a few minutes the knife descended and his head rolled into a basket.

TREMENDOUS LOSS IN LIVESTOCK VALUES

The value of livestock on Kentucky farms Jan. 1, 1922, was approximately $92,738,000 compared with $127,356,000 Jan. 1, 1921, and $165,705,000 Jan. 1, 1920, according to the annual estimates issued today by the U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates in cooperation with the State Commissioner of Agriculture W. C. Hanna. This is a decrease of $72,965,000 or more than 44 per cent in the value of Kentucky farmers' livestock since Jan. 1, 1920, and nearly 24 per cent below the 1914 values before the war. The decrease in total value is due chiefly to the shrinkage in prices, the there has been an accompanying decrease in numbers. Since Jan. 1, 1921, dairy cows show a decrease of only 1 per cent, other cattle 7 per cent, sheep 3 per cent and hogs 5 per cent in total numbers. Horses and mules show no change in numbers. This estimate gives the numbers of livestock on farms in Kentucky Jan. 1, 1922, as follows: Horses 374,000; mules 293,000; milk cows 520,000; other cattle 511,000; sheep 631,000 and swine 1214,000.

The average farm value of milk cows in Kentucky Jan. 1, 1922, was $4 per head compared to $73 Jan. 1, 1920; other cattle $20 compared to $38.80 Jan. 1, 1920; sheep $5 compared to $11; $105; mules $82, compared to 1920; horses $68 compared to swine $7.50 compared to $13.00 Jan. 1, 1920.

DEMOCRATS NOT ASLEEP IN SENATE

MISS WHITE'S BROTHER KILLED IN ASHLAND

Miss Paralee White, deputy federal clerk here, received the sad news of the death of her brother, John G. White, Jr., at Ashland, early Saturday. Details were not given, but she understood that he had been killed. Miss White left at once for Ashland. Before leaving she remarked to U. S. Commissioner Warfield Bennett that she had never known one of the men-folks of her family to die a natural death. Miss White is the daughter of the late John G. White, formerly of Clay county, and later postmaster at Winchester. Her forebears were involved in the famous Baker-White and other mountain feuds. Miss White has made many friends, since coming to Richmond, who extend sympathy to her in this hour of bereavement.

BIG GRAIN ALCOHOL PLOT IS UNEARTHED

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Prohibition agents announced here today they had unearthed a plot to flood Chicago and other large cities in the Central States with grain alcohol to be used in making "boot leg" whisky. They say the principal figures were arrested at Columbus, Ohio, and five carloads of alcohol were confiscated in four cities. They said the Columbus buyers were men who bought 190,000 gallons of alcohol from the government to be denatured but instead they shipped it to other cities, including Covington, Ky., to be sold to saloon keepers.

COURT ROOM STORMED TO SEE PICKFORD

New York, Feb. 25.—Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, her husband, Wednesday, proved so popular in federal court, where the diminutive motion picture star is contesting a $108,000 suit, that Reserve marshals were called to the assistance of the regular force to restrain over-demonstrative crowds that surged about the court room doors.

By order of Federal Judge Julian Mack, none but those having official business in court were permitted to enter, and it looked for a time as though the marshals would have to resort to violence to sweep back the masses that stormed the doors.

At the adjournment, Mr. Fairbanks, preceded by a phalanx of police and carrying his wife in his arms, strode through an enormous crowd to their automobile, which could not be started for several minutes, because of the press of sightseers fighting for a glimpse of the movie idols.

Miss Pickford is being sued by Mrs. Corn C. Wilkening, theatrical agent, for 10 per cent commission and interest for services she claims to have rendered in 1916. She alleges she obtained a salary increase from $4,000 to $10,000 a week for her.

Mrs. Wilkening testified that at Miss Pickford's request, she got the actress a contract with John R. Freuler at a salary of $8,500 a week for 85 weeks, and a bonus of $150,000. The preliminary negotiations completed, she testified, Miss Pickford instead signed a contract with Adolph Zukor for $10,000 a week. Mrs. Wilkening contended that the Zukor contract was made possible through her negotiations with Freuler.

HURT ALL OVER

Texas Lady Couldn't Sit, Stand or Lie With Any Comfort. Says "Cardui Did World of Good."

Bartlett, Texas.—Mrs. Nannie Meier, of Route 3, this place, states: "About three years ago I was in a very critical condition. I had been suffering for some time. To tell how I hurt would be impossible. 'I just hurt all over. I couldn't sit, stand or lay with any comfort, my back, sides and head all gave me a great deal of trouble. 'I was especially bothered with a light swimming in my head. My people were very uneasy about me and sent me to my relatives to see if a change would do me any good. 'I stopped at a sister-in-law's and she being a great believer in Cardui, asked me why I didn't use it. I decided to try it. 'I had only taken a few doses when I felt it would do me good. This gave hopes and I used it right along and it did me just a world of good, since which time I have never ceased to praise Cardui."

Cardui is for simple female complaints and womanly pains and has been found to benefit in thousands of such cases when not due to malformation or that do not require surgical treatment. Try it, NC-136a

MAKES A STRONG DEFENSE OF TRACTOR

In Answer To Statement of Horse Specialist Anderson of State Experiment Station

Richmond, Feb. 25.

Editor Daily Register:

We notice an article in your paper of the 24th in which one Mr. W. S. Anderson, secretary of the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association, makes a tirade against the farm tractor, and if the statements of Mr. Anderson are true, the best the tractor plants could do would be to quit business before all go broke.

For instance who is it who knows anything about a farm tractor believes that a tractor only does the work of 2 horses? Where can you find any two horses that can plow seven to ten acres of sod in a day and plow it deep as it should be; where can you find any two horses that can harrow twenty-five acres of ground in a day; where can you find any two horses that can plow harrow and seed a thirty acre field in a week; or any two horses that can pull a threshing machine, shred fodder, fill your silo, pump water, run a saw mill, hay baler, corn husker, and the hundred and one odd jobs around the farm besides the regular field work, and then on days when it is not at work, require no feed or attention, and instead of costing $1,000, costs considerably less than $500?

It is no doubt true a farmer can get along with horses with a less outlay of actual cash than he probably can with trucks and tractors, and he has to, because he does not have as much cash to put out. He can haul his tobacco to market with his two horses for less cash outlay than with a truck but when he hauls it ten to fifteen miles he has to get up and start before day and get back long after dark, with the entire day for one or two men gone, whereas, if he used a truck he could deliver his tobacco and get back to his farm before noon and put in a whole half day. If his time on the farm is worth anything, the horse is cheaper, but then if his time is worth nothing on a farm he had better quit the farm entirely and go where it is worth something.

Mr. Anderson refutes his own arguments when he admits "the tractors did help out in the rush of production and scarcity of labor during the war but the prime consideration in farm production now is economy." But the prime consideration is not economy alone, but more and better crops and more and better crops at less cost, and this result can only be obtained by more efficient methods of production, and this is the only means by which the farmer can make any progress or show any result beyond a bare living and the drudgery of 12 to 16 hours of hard labor a day. We are all lovers of the horse, and want to see his breeding and use continued where he is useful.

Where have you seen such letters as this on the subject of horses:

Gentlemen:—

Being connected with a good many country banks, either as a stockholder, or as an officer, visiting the country banks often coming in contact with the farmer direct and for a number of years being in the banking business and the majority of our loans being made to the farmers, I have come to the conclusion that the tractor is the most beneficial in every respect than any work implement that is placed on the farm.

The tractor is not like any other piece of machinery. Most machinery is used for a specific purpose and it cannot be used for anything else but a tractor is used for all purposes.

You can plough with it—you can pump water with it—you can cut wood with it—you can ditch with it—press hay—ditch with it and grade your roads; in fact, it is adaptable to do most anything that a man with any practical knowledge or farming can do.

It is the most valuable piece of machinery and a saving of money that a farmer possesses. In fact the tractor in my opinion is like electricity. It is in its infancy. It is a saving and I have always felt whenever I pass by a farmer who has a tractor that he is a safer risk to make a loan to because it shows he is progressing.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I had troubles that all women are apt to have, with pains in my back, weak, tired, nervous feelings and a weak stomach. I had been this way about a year and was unable to work or stand on my feet for any length of time. My husband's aunt told me how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done her and begged me to try it, so I did. All my pains and weakness are gone, my stomach is all right and I do my work at home and also work for Swift's Packing Company. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may publish my letter as a testimonial."

Again and again one woman tells another of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You who must keep yourself strong and well. You can't work if you are suffering from such troubles. Mrs. Lucas couldn't. She tried our Vegetable Compound and her letter tells you what it did for her. Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial now.

Spook Burglars Got Middlesboro Man's Roll

(By Associated Press)

Middlesboro, Feb. 25.—Russ Hill, while not a believer in spooks, had an experience on his return from the Baptist Organized Sunday School Convention at Mobile that not only has him guessing, but has baffled the police of Birmingham. He stopped at a hotel in Birmingham before retiring locked the doors and windows. When he awoke the next morning everything was in the same condition as when he retired—the windows and doors still were locked—with the exception that $65 in money and several articles in his pockets were missing. All that was left was his clothing. Police failed to find a clue.

Three men were arrested and ten still destroyed in a raid in Marion county.

GORGEOUS GIFTS FOR PRINCESS' WEDDING

Presents of Regal Magnificence Showered Upon Princess Mary and Fiance

(By Associated Press)

London, Feb. 25—Gifts of regal magnificence have been showered upon Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles in anticipation of their wedding, February 28. An estate of money and a score or more of other splendid presents, any one of which would represent a princely dowry for a bride of humbler station, are among the gifts which betoken a world-wide wish for the long life and happiness of the royal bride and her fiance.

The estate, a magnificent country seat in Yorkshire, comprising a fine old mansion, Goldborough Hall, and extensive grounds, was presented by the bridegroom's parents, the Earl and Countess of Harewood. This will be the future rural home of the Viscount and his bride.

When in London they will reside at Chesterfield House, a miniature palace in Park Lane which for some years has been the property of the bridegroom. It was placed at the disposal of the Japanese Crown Prince during his visit to England a year ago.

The rope of pearls was Viscount Lascelles' wedding present to his betrothed.

Donations in money, most of them to be used in the purchase of gifts of Princess Mary's own selection, have come from the city of London, the Girl Guides, British residents of Paris, from Danes and various other nationals living in the United Kingdom; from various charitable organizations, army, navy, and air force.

units with which the Princess came in contact during her many war-time activities and one tremendous fund which represents the good will of "the Marys of the British Empire."

Intimate friends of Princess Mary have sent rare bits of furniture. Members of the royal family have given an historic clock of the Stuart period. The King's Watermen gave a reproduction in silver of the ancient royal barge; the Friends of the Poor a handsome fire screen in Chippendale style; the citizens of Liverpool a magnificent diamond bracelet; citizens of Glasgow an elaborate mahogany dressing table fitted with finely cut crystal requisites.

New South Wales sent a gold loving cup set with Australian stones; Victoria's contribution was a writing table of Australian wood inlaid with Australian opals; Melbourne, Australia, sent black opal frame; and Edinburgh a Mary Queen of Scots brooch richly jeweled. Praiseably sent fine example of its famous shawls.

The Society of Women Artists has arranged for Mrs. Blakeney Ward to paint a portrait of Princess Mary as a gift from that organization. The Clan McDougal sent a replica "Brooch of Lorn" an ornament that has an ancient history. Legend says it was worn by Robert Bruce when the Brothers MacDougal tried to capture him after the battle of Methven. A struggle ensued. The clasp gave way, so the brooch remained with the MacDougal.

Princess Mary has expressed a liking for an unique service of gold plate that formerly belonged to King George the First. It is now in private hands. The service is said to be worth 10,000 pounds. The royal crown and motto are in the center of each of the 18 pieces, six of which are fan-shaped, forming one large circular dish when placed together. The service was made by a Huguenot refugee in 1714. One of the many funds subscribed throughout the Empire for the purchase of presents selected by the couple will be used in procuring this magnificent service.

Viscount Lascelles has received from the Doncaster Race Committee five silver statuettes representing types of the British Grenadier Guardsmen in full dress uniforms of periods from 1660 to 1914. The Viscount served with distinction in the Grenadier Guards during the late war. As he is also an Etonian, Eton school boys are making up a purse for the purchase of a present.

PLANS FOR STATE S. S. CONVENTION

Winchester, Feb. 25—Work on preparations for the State Sunday School Convention already has been begun and under the plan to be used in the perfecting of arrangements for the convention each month will see additional plans made and those already formulated put into effect. Two committees, one on publicity and one on music, already have been named and have begun on the tasks assigned to their respective members.

The committee on music has an especially arduous task ahead in the matter of organizing a state chorus to furnish programs during the convention.

Under the plan in use at each of the regular monthly meetings of the officers and departmental heads of the Clark County Sunday School Association another phase of the work necessary to be done in order to care for the convention will be taken up and the proper committees named to attend to that work. In this way, it is believed sufficient attention will be given to every detail of what is expected to be the largest Sunday School convention ever held in Kentucky.

A Munificent Gift

A Novel Method of starting Housekeeping that will be interesting to every reader. Written for the Richmond Daily Register.

On the morning of Wednesday Feb. 1st, there appeared in the Toronto Globe the following notice:

"Married—on the 21st ultimo, Miss Virginia Schofield and Col. Paul C. Churchill, at the First Baptist church by the Rev. A. E. Watson."

A letter to Henry Schofield, of Richmond, announcing the event soon brought a reply, for Virginia was, as Uncle Henry declared the only one left for him to take care of. He wrote very effusively of his delight at her wedding and proposed that if Paul and Virginia were to locate at Richmond and grow up with the country, he would bestow upon them such a gift as would enable them to have a nice home and live comfortably the rest of their days.

"This," wrote Henry, "will be my wedding gift to you. I don't know anything better for you to do, for Richmond has a delightful, wholesome social life you will like. I know and, with its wonderful farming community around, offers some splendid opportunities. We have a great, little city here and you'll feel at home in no time. In fact, Kentucky is the most suitable place for a young couple to start in life that I know of."

About 10 days subsequently a travel-worn party arrived in Richmond. Henry, though 60 years of age, was on hand at the L. & N. depot to greet the couple and as he shook hands with both of them at once, his face once more showed the gleam of youth and his feet were as spry as they gallantly directed the party to his machine.

"Well," said Uncle Henry, "as they rode over to the Glyndon, I hope you young folks enjoyed your trip south. Didn't you find it a little tiresome?"

"I should say not," replied Virginia. "I never enjoyed a trip more in my life. We had lovely weather all the way down and the scenery was the most beautiful I have ever seen. It was simply grand."

"I'm glad you had such a nice trip," said Henry, "though I guess you were glad to get here. Well, here we are, and I have your rooms already engaged for you."

"This is the Hotel Glyndon," said uncle as they entered. "They have their 60 rooms beautifully furnished, many of them having private bath, and everything is so thoroughly up-to-date from cellar to roof that everybody who comes here says there isn't a finer hotel in this part of the state. I've reserved a beautiful suite for you on the second floor and you will soon be fixed as comfortable as can be."

The party was cordially greeted by Mr. P. M. Smyer, the general proprietor, after which the young folks were shown to their suite, which greatly pleased Virginia by the luxury of its furnishings.

Virginia and Paul appeared at 6 o'clock, feeling much improved after removing the stains of travel and a short nap, and after enjoying one of the Glyndon's famous evening dinners, they repaired to the mezzanine where Virginia entertained them with the brilliancy of her musical renditions.

"I know I'm going to enjoy it here," she said, as leaving the mezzanine, they entered their suite, "for we have such lovely accommodations. It's just as comfy as can be."

"I thought you would like it," replied Henry.

"The older you get the more you will learn to appreciate a good hotel," said he. "Richmond is fortunate in having a hotel that makes one feel thoroughly at home the moment you enter the lobby, and that is what Mr. Tussey at the desk of the Glyndon Hotel aims to do. I have lived around a good deal in my life and I certainly do appreciate Mr. Smyer's efforts to make one feel so thoroughly at home for he conducts the Glyndon on the Statler hotels' principle—no matter what the argument is, the guest is right, for his hotel is conducted with both courtesy and service. The dining room cuisine, if you noticed, was above the average also, as it is under the charge of an able chef whose years of experience amply qualify him to satisfy the epicurean demands of a discriminating public. I have heard many favorable comments from the traveling men stopping here on the cuisine and courteous service, for we of Richmond feel that we are able to play the hospitable host to any size number of guests who may visit us without any apology on our part. I don't care how elegantly a hotel is furnished, one never feels at home if the wrong man is at the head of it. Mr. Smyer is an able manager, for many years of business experience and his affability of manner and his knowledge of how to make friends and keep them with the traveling public has won for him a host of admiring acquaintances."

Tired out with travel, the little company broke up after dinner that evening and retired for the night. In the morning after the usual greetings had been given and the breakfast partaken of, Uncle Henry, in his original manner, said, "Well, folks, I think as soon as we get some cigars that we would best be looking at a house or two, so we'll just phone to the garage and have them send down my Dodge."

As they seated themselves in Uncle Henry's sedan a few minutes later and went whizzing out Main street, Virginia remarked, "Well, Uncle, isn't this a most exhilarating ride, and such a beautiful machine, too; how noiselessly and smoothly it runs. Do they use many of them here?"

"Quite a number," replied Henry. "The Woods and White Company are one of our most progressive firms and since they started selling the Dodge Brothers cars, have sold quite a number of them. In my opinion they have the best machine on the market, and one I have found, by experience, gets the least out of order, and a prettier, more easily running car I don't know of, for it combines power, lightness, compactness, with flexibility and economy of operation."

Take this 1922 Dodge sedan we are riding in, and notice the luxurious upholstery and mechanical devices. What more can you ask in a car equipped as it is, and with cord tires as standard equipment, selling as it does now for $1565 delivered in Richmond. It is mechanical perfection and will stand up under most any kind of usage you give it."

"It certainly is a beauty," Virginia exclaimed, "and am I going to be taught to run it?"

"Indeed, you are, my dear, and better than that. While this car is big enough for us all, I have bought you, for your own use in shopping and to make calls, a Dodge Brothers three seat coupe, that I consider one of the prettiest cars of the year."

"I want you both to meet Mr. R. G. Woods and Mr. W. H. White when we go back," continued Uncle Henry. "They are a thoroughly responsible firm, in fact, that is one of the main reasons why I chose the Dodge Brothers car for you—you are buying from a local company that possesses financial strength and stability and in case anything should go wrong you have the Dodge Brothers immense organization to make your complaint good, for they stock a complete line of parts at all times. They have a splendid service station in a thoroughly modern, steam heated garage, with a mechanical repair and rebuilding department of seven men who are real experts in their line. You take my word for it, I'm solid on a Dodge."

"If you are fond of commodes, Virginia," said uncle, as they drove along, "here is one Mr. Saulley was telling me the other day, and he says the Daily Register will give $1000 in gold to the person who sends in the most artistic correct answer by Thursday, March, 2nd."

"Well, what is it?" laughingly inquired Virginia. "You have me interested."

"Here it is," replied Henry, pulling out a sheet of paper:

"A single I am, a twin I am never;
A triplet I am, though my parts you can sever.
Search well for me here, but bear this in mind:
The more you discover, the less you will find."

"What's the answer?" questioned Paul, with much curiosity.

"The answer," replied Henry, "Mr. Saulley tells me is PRINTED IN THE FOUR LINES of the puzzle, and you study it out for a while, or I'll tell you exactly what it is before we get through for you will enjoy it, I know."

In answer to Dave's question as to where they wanted to go, Uncle Henry replied: "Just drive around the city. Murphy. We want to look at a bit of Mother Earth. It's the basis of a home, Paul." It was an ideal winter's day for the trip and their journey was made all the more enjoyable by Uncle Henry pointing out the various places of interest en route. After driving around for awhile and looking over several houses Uncle Henry exclaimed: "Take us to that house, Dave where we were the other day. This house, Paul is in a dandy, select neighborhood, with a lot 50x250 feet deep and is high, dry, beautifully laid out and less than a mile from the postoffice—there it is—see what you youngsters think of it."

"Perfectly lovely," exclaimed Virginia, stepping from the auto, as they drew up to the house on West Main street. "Oh, wouldn't it be nice to live out here? Just notice how clear and fresh the air is."

Paul was equally enthusiastic and uncle, pleased, began at once to tell of the advantages of buying such a home. "You see," he said, "this double lot and house with a concrete driveway to the garage can be bought at a remarkably attractive figure. It has six delightful, big rooms that only need repapering to suit your taste, and with water, sewerage gas and telephone, it means your home will have every modern convenience. There is also a dandy modern bath, and we'll have it wired a little more conveniently for Virginia's electric appliances. The garage is all right but we'll sell it and put up a two-car garage with room to work in, for I'm just old-fashioned enuf to like to take care of a guest properly and not chase his car down to a public garage or leave it out in the weather, so by expending $700 to $800 in improvements to suit your own ideas will give you a home to be proud of, for it is a good street. It seems there is no better bargain to be had anywhere," Virginia and Paul both agreed with Uncle Henry and were anxious to "cinch the deal" as Paul termed it.

"All right," said Uncle Henry. "Dave, take us down to the Freeman Realty Company."

It did not take long to reach the offices on Main street and uncle, after introducing the couple to Mr. L. W. Dunbar, their genial manager, had the paper drawn up, deeding to Virginia the property. Virginia was very happy when they left, while Uncle Henry remarked how well he liked to deal with Mr. Dunbar.

"You know there are real estate firms who are always looking for the best end of it but I've known Mr. Dunbar for several years now and have always found him a man of business responsibility and integrity. He does a big business here in farm and city property, loans and investments for he is the most active real estate man in town. I'm mighty glad you liked the property we bought for I somehow always wanted to live there."

"Poultry, fruit and bees make a good combination for a small farmer," remarked Uncle, "which reminds me of another good conundrum, Virginia, that Mr. Dunbar handed me the other day. Why is a beehive like a bad potato?"

"I haven't been able to think of anything but those pretty Normal School girls I saw at the depot last night," remarked Paul.

"Nice thing for a young married man to say," laughed uncle, "but you get busy with some grape-nuts and think it over, or maybe I'll tell you after a while. You remind me."

"Now we are up to the lumber question for your new garage," said Uncle Henry, "so before we go any further, suppose we drive over to the Savage-Smith Lumber Company. I have known them for some time and I'm sure they will give us a square deal. They carry the most complete stock in this part of the country, everything from sills to shingles, and from tree to consumer. Their motto is, 'Everything in lumber to build your home.'"

"They have the best yard in Richmond," continued Uncle, after making the folks acquainted with Mr. E. W. Savage, the President, Mr. P. W. Smith, the Vice-President, and Mr. C. E. Whalen, the Secretary-Treasurer of the company, "where you can get anything needed for a modern house as they take orders for all kinds of interior works and grills to order, and can turn out anything desired. Their goods are always uniform, the milling is perfect, and a point I especially like is, all their flooring, rustic, ceiling, and finishing lumber is kiln dried and that means that your home won't shrink apart, as so many houses do. They are supplied from some of the best up-to-date mills in the country with hardwood, such as quarter sawed oak, birch, maple and cypress, used in interior finishing. Then all their finishing lumber is kept under cover, and that's what carpenters like—nice, dry lumber. Their yards are backed up by the best mills in the country, so their stock is always up to the minute, and as for prices; well, there is no yard around here that can quote the prices which the Savage-Smith Company can quote. People wanting to build, as a rule, like to see what they can do, but invariably they come back to them for all they need."

"Some very fine houses are of material from this yard, for instance, the homes of Mrs. Jonah Wagers, Mr. J. H. Oldham, and Mr. W. W. Broadbent in this city. Dave Cobb, out on the Lexington

"What is the most interesting part of going to housekeeping, Virginia?" inquired Henry, as they left the gas office.

"Selecting good furniture and pretty draperies," replied that wise young person promptly.

"That's so," laughingly answered Henry, "and here is where we get wonderfully busy."

Entering the beautiful store of the W. F. Higgins Company, a few moments later, they were taken in charge by Mr. M. C. Murphy, and courteously shown through the various departments that rather bewildered Virginia by the display that she found there. It was interesting to watch her expressions of pleasure as she journeyed from floor to floor making her selections for the soon to be chosen a handsome two tone walnut suite in Queen Anne style, with bow-end bed and a triple vanity dresser for her own bedroom, another suite with four poster bed in mahogany with a chiffonier for Uncle Henry's bedroom, a handsome ivory suite with bow-end bed and vanity dresser for her guest room, a daybed table with rocker, a day bed, with three piece overstuffed davenport suite in a beautiful dark blue tapestry for her living room, a nine-piece Queen Anne period suite in genuine walnut with round table for her dining room, several odd pieces in rockers and a Royal easy chair for hully.

"Now, what kind of covering do you want for your floors, Virginia?" he inquired.

"Why, I'd like Smith Axminster rugs for my bedrooms and Kleazar rugs for my dining room and for my library," she replied, "for being sanitary, they are so easily kept clean."

"You couldn't select more durable ones," he assented. "For buying them direct from the makers their prices cannot be equalled anywhere."

"And here are two other important household articles—a Sellers kitchen cabinet with automatic lowering floor bin that will save you many useless steps, and a White Mountain enamel refrigerator that will last you a lifetime. And pick out several of these beautiful library and floor lamps; they do much to add to the coziness of a home. And while here let us select a handsome Columbia Grafonola with a number of classical records."

"Gracious me," Virginia exclaimed as they stood waiting for Dave to start their car. "I could have stayed in there all day, there were so many beautiful things to admire as well as wish for."

"You're only voicing the opinion of the majority of the people of Richmond," Uncle Henry replied. "You know it is a fine store, for they carry everything in the housefurnishing line from the lowest to whatever you desire to pay, with every article absolutely as good as they guarantee and their popular plan of monthly payments has helped many a young couple to begin housekeeping properly. I've dealt with them for years, for, to my mind, a ramble through their store is an afternoon pleasantly and profitably spent."

"Now suppose we go to lunch," said Uncle Henry as they left after luncheon. "There is a little business I wish to attend to before the closing hour."

Arriving at the Citizens National Bank, uncle introduced the young folks to John W. Crooke, the cashier of the bank, after which he deposited a thousand dollars to the young folks' credit

"There is no dirt, no ashes to clean up, no cinders or soot, it is equally kind to a woman's temper as it is to her house furnishings and curtains. The whole city within its limits, is piped for it."

"How is your water here?" inquired Paul. "Is it good?"

"The State Board of Health says so," replied Henry, "and they are mighty emphatic about it. Our two reservoirs hold 100,000,000 gallons of good surface water, which is purified by chlorine gas, too. The company have lately until it is known as chemically pure. They test it every month, overhauled their two big compound pumps, which give us a city pressure of about 70 pounds, unless we have a fire, when it is instantly raised to 150 lbs. pressure, which makes the Richmond Water Company one of the most up-to-date in Central Kentucky."

as an additional gift to begin life on.

"The Citizens National is the largest and most progressive bank in the county," he said, "being established since 1905, and with whom I have done business for years. While they are conservative in all their dealings, yet their reliable methods of doing business have won for them the confidence of the entire community."

"I see by their latest report they had on hand resources amounting to over $1,000,000.00, with capital stock and surplus and undivided profits of over $160,000 which is strength sufficient to keep any man from worrying as to whether or not his account is safe. Then again, their deposits of around $700,000 are something any bank should be proud of, showing the absolute confidence of all classes of people in this institution."

Henry also insisted upon Virginia opening a personal checking account "to pay your household and dressing bills," said he. "It prevents losing money through carelessness or theft, and gives you an indisputable receipt for every account paid."

"Their statement almost made me dizzy," said the Major. "All those big totals of capital, surplus and deposits."

The Citizens National is one of the strongest banks in Central Kentucky," replied Henry as they lit their cigars after leaving the bank. "When you consider their wonderful steady growth, it speaks well for the confidence reposed in them. They are members of the Federal Reserve System, in fact, every department is under direct supervision of the United States government. Their banking quarters have lately been remodeled, as you could see and they have a thoroughly fireproof and burglarproof vault, with safety deposit boxes, that is one of the best in Kentucky."

"They do a big business here, for their Board of Directors are business men of known responsibility and with their immense resources they are able to finance any kind of an account that comes within the scope of good legitimate banking procedure. I have carried my account here for years."

"I guess we had better arrange for our flowers," said uncle, as they left the bank. "I want to make arrangements for the decorations for our first reception next week."

It was but a few minutes' ride out to the beautiful Richmond Green Houses. Henry introduced them to Mr. M. S. Pontich, the proprietor, who came forward to wait upon them.

Virginia expressed great surprise at the magnitude of the floral display, for they found a complete and varied assortment of the choicest grade of flowers, plants, ferns, palms, etc.

"I noticed you didn't spend much time in telling what kind of flowers you wanted," said Paul, aside to uncle, as Mr. Pontich wrapped up for Virginia a dozen beautiful roses.

"I didn't have to," quickly asserted Uncle Henry. "When you have lived here as long as I have you'll know that Mr. Pontich knows 'how' and what to use in the way of floral decorations, once he understands the occasion and the amount you wish to expend. All right, Virginia, we're with you."

"That's one thing I live in hopes of having," said Virginia, as they were riding back to town "a little green house of my own. Hasn't he some beautiful flowers and those beautiful Easter lilies!"

"Indeed they have," replied Henry. "Their line of roses, lilies, carnations, sweet peas, hyacinths and daffodils are the best one can procure, and we are fortunate in having Mr. Pontich as decorator, whose excellent taste in suggesting the appropriate decorations required for a party, church, banquet, or wedding event keeps the Richmond Green Houses one of the busiest firms here. Then being a member of the Florist Telegraph Delivery, they can take orders and deliver in any city in the United States and Canada."

"What was that quiet little order you put in on the side?" laughingly inquired Paul.

"Just a little surprise for Virginia," whispered Henry. "I told which he deposited a thousand dollars to the young folks' credit of flowers for Virginia's birthday next week in your name and to reserve us a suitable number of roses for her suite at the hotel every day. One thing you must always remember, my boy, (laying his arms affectionately across Paul's shoulder) just because you are married, don't forget your wife still loves flowers as she did while you courted her. A great many married men overlook a bet there. Pontich does a big business here, for with their own big green house their flowers are always fresh and that means something."

"Well," said uncle, "after this running around we have forgotten to buy any hardware."

"I'm glad you folks woke up," laughed Paul, "for I was wondering what Virginia was going to cook with."

"Easy to settle that point," replied uncle. "We'll drive down to the Richmond Welch Store, our hardware department store, and after I introduce you to Mr. R. H. Embree, the manager, you can pick out anything you want. They carry a tremendous stock."

"Virginia was soon deeply interested in her purchases, buying a Copper Chad combination coal and wood range; a full line of 'Lisk' model enameled ware, an array of aluminum ware, a handsome Winchester carving set, half a dozen Pyrex cooking ware, a beautiful chest of Community silverware in their 'Patrician' pattern, a non-breakable thermos jar to take on their auto trips, and a complete array of accessories."

At uncle's suggestion they also selected a "Mirrow" Aluminum roaster "for your first Thanksgiving turkey," said he, "and don't you think we had best select several of those pretty Rochester Casseroles and a Universal electric coffee pot? They add so much to a table, I think."

"I was just wishing you would include them," said Virginia, wistfully. "Thank you so much."

"The next thing we want is a Duplex Fireless Cooker, for you will find its operation will save you time for calling and other social duties, and pick out a set of that 'Blue Bird' china, for they are all open stock patterns."

"It's a pleasure to buy at a store like that," exclaimed Virginia, as they drove away again "and what a stock that was, especially in the line of household goods. Is there anything the Richmond Welch Store do not carry?"

"Not in the hardware line there isn't," replied Henry. "They have the largest stock of builders' and carpenters' hardware, and the best line of accessories for the housewife in or around Richmond with a unique self-serve grocery department that you will find saves you many dollars on your grocery bill. I like to trade there."

"Paul," remarked uncle, as they left Mr. Perry, "you probably think you know it all, but a business man in these days must have a knowledge of up-to-date business methods, so we will drive over to Lexington and visit the Miller School of Business on Main street—just in front of the court house. They have a splendid commercial school, in one of the most modern business homes in the state, over the Woolworth Stores, and from a personal acquaintance with a large number of their students, I know that when they graduate and leave the college, they are thoroughly competent to take a position of the greatest responsibility."

"It was only an hour's run to Lexington, uncle pointing out the beautiful scenery and prominent homes en route. After arriving at the college and presenting the young folks to Dr. E. G. B. Mann the president, and Miss Maude Miller, the vice president and superintendent of the school, uncle continued:

"Their course of training is very thorough and, during the time that the school has been here it has graduated a large number of students, who are very successful business men and women. They teach the Gregg system of shorthand, giving personal instruction to every student, and it does not take a lifetime to learn it, for they use the most improved method of teaching with the 'touch system' of typewriting. In addition they use the new Dictation Method in shorthand which means dictation from the first day you enter school."

"Do you mean that the Miller students are able to take dictation of flowers for Virginia's birthday next week in your name and to reserve us a suitable number of roses for her suite at the hotel every day. One thing you must always remember, my boy, (laying his arms affectionately across Paul's shoulder) just because you are married, don't forget your wife still loves flowers as she did while you courted her. tion from the first day they enter school?"

"Exactly so. Another feature in which this school leads is its practical training department where they give special training on the adding machines, which includes the stencil cutting, dictaphone, etc. Every student serves as office executive and supervises the work of other students in his charge before accepting a position."

"Everything is so beautiful and home like and in such good taste," exclaimed Virginia. "I would not mind coming here myself. Are their charges reasonable?"

"Their charges are very reasonable," replied Henry, "considering the efficiency of the instruction and they have the patronage of the best families of the city and state. In fact, with a few exceptions their students are high school and college people. They have a large enrollment of students, which fact speaks well for their work, for their instruction is so efficient that they are able to place every graduate student in a paying position. They teach the most thorough and up-to-date banking system together with usual auxiliary studies and their courses of the twentieth century bookkeeping is the best known. Because of demands they have recently established an advanced accounting department in which corporation and cost accounting are taught."

"Uncle Henry," said Paul, as they left Miss Miller, "Virginia and I had a bet coming down on the train from Cleveland and I lost. Have you a good candy store in Lexington?"

"Where do you suppose you are, anyway?" replied Henry. "Still in Toronto? You come with me and I'll show you a candy store that for beauty and quality cannot be excelled even in the big cities."

Entering McGurk and O'Brien's beautiful candy store, 100 West Main street, Lexington, Uncle had Miss Mahoney select for Virginia an attractive box of their finest candies.

"While we are here," said Henry, "suppose we have a hot chocolate, for they serve such dainty, tasteful drinks here, and such delicious sandwiches, salads and pies, better than your mother used to make, that it is no wonder it is becoming the recognized social place to meet. Isn't this a perfect place?"

"Indeed, it is," replied Virginia. "I don't think I have ever been in a more attractive one. Everything seems in such perfect taste and harmony. And isn't this chocolate delicious?"

Having finished, Mr. O'Brien kindly offered to take them back and show them how their candies were made.

"I like to eat candies when I know they are made in as sanitary a place as this," remarked Henry. "Then all the materials they use, sugar, eggs, cream, chocolate, etc., are of the strictest purity. A pretty good name for this establishment would be to call it 'The Quality Shop.'"

"That was a mighty busy place," said Virginia, as they rode away, "and what an assortment they seemed to carry. They must do an enormous business."

"They do," Henry asserted. "They have the most popular candy and soda store in Lexington, for in addition to making their own candies of recognized purity they make their own ice cream, ices and fancy cakes for parties and banquets, and besides being the favorite luncheon place in Lexington for out-of-town shoppers, it is the only place in the city where you can find holiday favors for every occasion. A delicatessen department they have recently added contains so many delectable dishes prepared in their own kitchen and from their own recipes."

"They have a splendid reputation as caterers, also, which Mr. McGurk has exclusive charge of, doing all the catering work through Central Kentucky, for no party, wedding event or banquet is considered complete without their catering. In fact they recently received orders for a very large banquet within a stone's throw of Louisville on account of their superior service. I go there often when in Lexington, for their luncheons are delicious and reasonable."

"Well, this has been a pretty strenuous day," remarked Virginia, as they were having dinner that evening at the Glyndon. "But I have had a most delightful time."

"I thought you might find it a little tiresome," laughingly replied Henry, "so I've sort of reserved ed a little treat for you tonight." "What on earth can it be?" exclaimed Virginia. "You have me interested."

"I'm going to take you to the Opera House," replied the old man. "I hear they have a fine show tonight."

They arrived at the Opera House just as a film was being finished, and during the short intermission, Uncle Henry remarked:

"You can say what you like, but I like moving pictures like they show them here. The Opera House for evening performances and the Alhambra for matinees are under the same management. Did you notice how clear that last picture was? Well, they are all like that, absolutely flickerless, made so by the use of two of the very latest Power's 6A machines, the best electric, automatic machine made, and I certainly admire Miss Anna Belle's taste in giving her many patrons pictures that pleasingly instruct, amuse and interest one without the slightest vulgarity. They run largely with the celebrated First National exhibitors pictures, Paramount, Arcraft, and Goldwyn pictures so I know you will enjoy all the pictures shown here."

As they were walking home after the performance Virginia remarked: "Well, I certainly enjoyed that performance for that film was fine. It was a treat, and such a pretty place, but is it always crowded like that?"

"It's just the same every night for Miss Ward is making many friends by her choice of good films."

"It must cost something to get up a film like 'The Affairs of Anatol'?" interrupted Paul.

"I guess it does," responded the old man, "but expense is no object when a good film has to be produced. Miss Ward has some very fine bookings we must see, as Thomas Meighan in 'White and Unmarried,' February 27th; Charlie Chaplin in 'The Idle Class,' February 28th; Clara Kimball Young in 'The Eyes of Youth,' March 1, and Mack Sennett's 'A Small Town Idol' on March 2. Then comes Gloria Swanson March 7 and 8 in 'Her Great Movement.'"

"I say, Uncle Henry," said Paul as they entered the Glyndon, "I've been mulling over that bally 'Single Puzzle' you gave us today, and I've got it, by jove! It's 'Trinity'! Am I right, what?"

"Not by a long shot, son," he replied. "Where do you find 'Trinity' in that puzzle? I said the answer was printed in the four lines of the puzzle. I'll bet the cigars 'Gene got it through.'"

"Of course I did," she laughingly replied. "It didn't take me over a minute."

"Well, what was it?" Charlie persisted.

"That's telling, my dear; and I want you to surprise our dear uncle by solving it all by your lonesome," and she laughed merrily at his discomfiture.

The young folks appeared at breakfast next morning feeling much refreshed after a good night's sleep. As they lingered over breakfast, Uncle outlined the plans for the day.

"Now, what shall we do first?" asked Henry, as having secured their supply of cigars, they entered the machine.

"Paul, dear," exclaimed Virginia, as they started off to shop. "I'm thoroughly ashamed of that horrid suit you are wearing. Where can we get some nice, wearing apparel, uncle?"

"Why, we'll go up the street to the fastest growing clothing store in Richmond," said he. "R. C. H. Covington Company carry the swellest line of clothing and fashionable haberdashery in town and you ought to trade there."

Arriving at Covington's beautiful store and after meeting Mr. James H. Leeds, the manager, Paul humored Virginia by allowing her to select two handsome suits of Kenton Clothes for business wear, a beautiful pair of Hanan Shoes for dressy wear and a pair of Speedwell Shoes which are high quality shoes at popular prices. They also bought several "Enro" brand shirts, a half dozen fine neckties, a full supply of Munsingwear and Cooper's underwear and several new spring shirts with colors attached.

"What about buying me something," laughingly inquired Virginia. "Why of course," Henry assured. "We'll get a nice supply of 'Cadet' Silk Hosiery for you and some Holeproof Hosiery for the major. How's that?"

"Some sale they seem to be having, today," remarked the Major.

"This is one of the busiest stores in town," Henry answered, "for with 25 years' experience they are the oldest established outfitters for men and boys we have and are widely known for their fair and square dealing. You need never be afraid of being overcharged here at any time for they are men of modern business methods and ideas, and their best idea is to sell the best grade of clothing at a much closer margin of profit than most stores. Then their clothing is purchased from the best makers in the world, and selling as they do, under their own personal guarantee, if anything should go wrong with any garment purchased, if the customer will call at the store they will rectify the trouble at once. They really carry the largest and best line of clothing for men and children in town for their styles are always the latest and their courtesy and desire to please a customer is much appreciated throughout the city."

"I enjoyed meeting Mr. Collins and Mr. Thorpe and Mr. Robert Covington, so much," said Virginia as they rode away. "They are nice fellows, and will go out of their way to please you."

"Do you know, Uncle Henry," said Paul, after bidding good day to Mr. Leeds. "When Virginia and I were married, I was many days trying to think of a suitable present wedding gift. I gave her a nice set of furs."

"That was all right, son," replied uncle, "only you weren't quite up-to-date."

"How's that?" he inquired.

"Why, in these modern days, with steam roads, electricity, autos and elevators, all on the lookout for a human victim, is only fair that a young wife should have some financial protection, don't you think?"

"You mean life insurance," he ejaculated.

"Exactly," replied Henry. "I hardly think there is a woman today, with average common sense, that wouldn't sigh with relief if her intended husband should place in her hands a life insurance policy for a wedding gift. So as you have evidently neglected this little girl, we'll run over to Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the McKee building, and ease both your minds on that score."

After meeting Mr. F. M. Stiver, the resident agent, it took but a few minutes for Paul to make out his application for a twenty year payment life policy, with the smiling assurance of Mr. Stiver that as soon as the formality of a medical examination was gone through with, his policy would be immediately in force.

"That is some of the best work we have done today," exclaimed Uncle Henry, as they waited for the car "I for one am a firm believer in life insurance of all kinds and having always carried my own policies with the Metropolitan, I naturally think it is good enough for you, also. It's a good policy you have, that matures in 20 years, and if the necessity for carrying it should cease the company will, if desired, deliver to you a paid-up policy for 150 to 200 per cent of the total premium paid—thus making it a savings account with incidental protection, and as for the mortgage on your lots which you assume today, you can readily see that with your policy equal to and even more than the mortgage, if you should die even before the second premium is due, your home is clear from debt with a surplus besides. Besides you are in a company that is noted for its solidity as well as conservative management, and having gilded assets of over $800,000,000 with $6,192,000,000 of insurance in force, you don't have to wonder why 40 to 50 per cent of their new business yearly, comes from their old policy holders."

"Uncle Henry," said Virginia, "I'd like to buy some toilet articles and presents for the folks in Toronto. Where shall we go for them?"

"To the best store in town," promptly answered her uncle. "We'll go over to Perry's Rexall Store. They are the leading druggists in the city, and have the finest line I ever saw."

After meeting Mr. Henry L. Perry and Mr. Hart Perry, Virginia was looking over the beautiful display and making her selections when uncle called the attention of the young folks to the thoroughly modern appearance about the store and explained how Mr. Perry had established an excellent reputation for the accuracy of his prescription department in which two prescription pharmacists were employed.

"There is one thing I like about this store," said Henry. "I've never come in here yet and had them ask me to take a substitute. They don't do that kind of business."

"Pleasant gentlemen, are they not?" asked Virginia, as she waited for her Ansco Camera, with supplies and other purchases to be wrapped. "And I never drank a more delicious milk drink in my life."

"This is the best liked pharmacy in the city," emphatically remarked uncle, as he finished giving instructions for what "Love Brothers House Paint" and Kyanize Varnishes they wanted for the house, "for it comes from Perry's it's right. And I've dealt with them for several years. What you get here whether drugs, sundries, their line of Rexall remedies; their line Nunnally and Marvis French Candy; their Jontel and Homburgs line of domestic and imported perfumes; cigars, pharmaceuticals—in fact, everything—you can bank on it being the best, and with your camera, Virginia, remember as you are a novice, they want you to feel at liberty to come to them for expert knowledge and advice."

"They were certainly a busy store," remarked Paul as he helped Virginia into the machine.

"You don't have to guess the answer," Uncle Henry replied. "They have one of the most up-to-date fountains in town, making their own fruit syrups, and what many people like is, they deliver prescriptions and goods to every part of the city, which is part of their Rexall Home Service. Mr. Perry does a big business, for he has the largest stock of pharmaceuticals in the country, an ideal location and is well liked here."

"Uncle," said Virginia as they left Perry's, "won't you please take me to a good millinery store, where I can get a couple of nice hats. I want something chic and stylish."

"All right," said uncle, "we'll go across to the Culton Millinery Company, where I am sure that you will find just what you want as they are Richmond's best milliners."

Upon entering the shop Virginia was introduced to Miss Culton and Miss Mary Miller, who had charge of the millinery, after which she was pleased to see such a varied display of attractive and artistically trimmed hats, and she was not long in making her selections of two very choice and becoming hats, one of which was a close fitting jaunty affair which Virginia explained "would not blow off in a windstorm," and the other a dressy hat for evening wear.

Virginia's face was radiant as they left the store and when uncle remarked about it, she exclaimed, "Well, uncle, it is such a pleasure to go to a place where one finds quality and skill portrayed in all that is exhibited especially so in millinery; and that is what I found at Miss Culton's. Each and every hat was a piece of art, and possessed a style and individuality of its own and their beautiful creations in periwinkles, gray, steel, jade, fuchsia shade and zinc were just the most artistic that I've ever seen, so it didn't take me long to find what I wanted. I also bought one of the prettiest sport hats you ever saw for I know where to buy my hats in the future."

"You're right there," said uncle. "Miss Miller is a finished artist in her line, for she is recognized as Richmond's foremost milliner and her excellent aptitude as to what style of millinery ladies look best in and her originality in building exclusive millinery to order is winning many admiring patrons among the most exclusive families of the city."

"And such a splendid line of stationery and fiction she carried," Virginia continued. "The best line you will find in town," Henry answered, "not only in stationery and fiction, but in school supplies, magazines, daily papers and a circulating library that gives you the latest books. Both Miss Culton and Miss Miller are well liked here and they do a good business."

"Miss Culton gave me a fine poem the other night," said Henry, as they rode along. "Would you like to hear it?"

"Indeed I would," said Virginia.

"How true that sounds!" exclaimed the Colonel.

"I'd like to hear that again some time."

"Suppose we go over to lunch now," said Henry.

"Traveling two days on a train is not conducive to keeping one's clothes in good shape," remarked Paul, as Virginia bidding adieu to Miss Culton and Miss Miller, they walked out to the car, "and I feel as though I look like a tramp. What do you know about it?"

"Easiest thing in the world," promptly answered Uncle Henry. "We'll ride over to the office and works of the Dixie Dry Cleanery, on Second street, and I'll show you a cleaning and pressing establishment that is the best of its kind in Central Kentucky."

The couple assented, and upon reaching the plant, they were presented to Mr. George Goodloe, the proprietor, who gladly showed them through, explaining as they went their up-to-date method of handling every line of work. They were shown the big pressing room, where the latest type of steam presses were working, the special laboratory for the "spotting" of ladies fine waists and garments, and finally the immense dry cleaning department adjoining the pressing room, that, filled with the latest type of gasoline machines, washers and centrifugal wringers, and was a veritable beehive of industry. As they were walking to the office, Paul remarked that "the Dixie" was certainly equipped to do fine work."

"They have the best reputation in the city," remarked Uncle emphatically. "There is no odor left by their process of cleaning, for they have a skilled dry cleaner of twenty years experience, two years of which he spent in Chicago, and only expert pressers, who thoroughly know how to remove the soil and stains, brightening up all colors, freshening up all fabrics, and who understand how to take out creases and wrinkles, thereby renewing the shape of the garment so that it looks like new. They are also the only place in town where I would care to send a fine panama hat for special blocking and cleaning. Then, as you saw, they make a specialty of cleaning and re-shaping gloves, for which they have special glove shapers, and their rug department with their new Vacuum machine for extracting dirt, where they clean, wash and re-size the finest rugs, is one of the busiest parts of plant."

"Some pretty fine building for cleaning, I would say," commented Paul, as they left.

"It was built and planned especially for a model cleaning establishment," replied Henry. "For in case of fire, they can quickly throw live steam into either department, and with their gasoline underground storage system, the largest of any cleaning establishment in Central Kentucky, they naturally reduce their fire risk to nil. They do a big business here, being 'Master Dyers and Cleaners,' having earned their reputation by honest, careful work."

"What about lunch?" inquired Paul. "This running around has made me hungry."

"Let's go," said Henry.

"I guess," said Uncle Henry, after luncheon, "before we go any further Virginia, I want you to buy a few things for yourself, so come with me and I'll take you into the J. B. Stouffer Company, one of our leading Dry Goods stores, as it is the smartest place of its kind for young girls."

Upon entering the store Uncle introduced Virginia and Paul to Mrs. J. B. Stouffer and Mr. J. S. Sewell, who, after a pleasant few minutes chat, called the head saleswoman, who personally showed them around among the different departments that are of such interest to ladies of taste and breeding. Virginia was almost dumfounded by the many beautiful things she found there, and she bought a very handsome tailored suit from their early spring "Correct Line" of Tailored Suits and Skirts, upon which there was the slightest alterations to be made; an imported waist and Knox hat; a "La Camille" corset, several pairs of Lyons gloves, a dainty outfit of silk lingerie, several pairs of "Armor Plate" silk hose and many other things which appeal so irresistibly to every woman.

While doing her shopping and making her selections, Virginia was heard to exclaim: "Isn't Stouffer's a beautiful little store for a city the size of Richmond?"

"You're right it is," replied Uncle, "and that's why I brought you in here. They always keep so well posted on the latest styles and with their excellent alteration department under the charge of Mrs. Moore, who is also their corsetiere, give a lady service that is unexcelled. If you notice, every garment and hat is kept in fireproof cabinets and every garment sold is guaranteed to be exclusive and correct in fit and style, all their goods coming from the leading tailoring and fashionable dress-making establishments of the East."

"This is one of the prettiest stores here and I'm glad you brought me in," Virginia exclaimed, as they walked out to the car, "for you are going to find that I am quite a shopper, Uncle dear."

"That's one of the chief delights of being a woman, little girl," laughed he. "I know you will always get satisfaction there for no matter what you buy of Stouffer's, they insist that you be perfectly satisfied with the purchase or bring it back, and that sort of treatment wins friends and keeps them, anywhere, where it persisted in. They have been operating only about four months, but they are keeping stock to meet the demands of a discriminating public, for they are running their business under two excellent principles—We keep what you want and at the right price—and that will win success for anybody, anywhere, anytime."

"Now," said Henry, "as Virginia will probably want to do some baking, we'll need coal and as we want the best that money can buy, we'll ride over to Wiloughby Bros., West Second and North Third street, and arrange for our coal order. That's where I always bought our coal when your Aunt Jennie was living. They do a very large coal business, both wholesale and retail, handling the famous Red Comet Coal from Eastern Kentucky, Hazard Field Coal and the well known Crech Coals, which they sell a great deal of. Then their prices are reasonable considering the excellent quality, and as for quantity, well I never knew them to be short on a ton yet."

"My but this is a busy office," said Virginia. "They must do a big coal business," as meeting Mr. H. B. Wiloughby, the manager, they waited for Henry to get a carbon of his order.

"You can bank on that, little girl," replied Henry. "That Red Comet Coal we ordered, which is sold under a rigid guarantee to give satisfaction or they will remove it from your bin, is the best coal sold in Richmond and its superior quality, in connection with their proper methods of handling it, has pushed their sales enormously. Their Red Comet enjoys a good name for its excellent quality, giving more heat units than any coal I know of. You don't have to fight clinkers, and but a very small percentage of ash, it burns so freely."

"How about coal for the fireplace?" inquired Paul. "Do you use the Crech Coal?"

"By all means," answered Henry. "I have used it and speak from experience when I say that it's the best grate coal I ever used. And I have heard many compliments on their grade of Hazard Field Coal for furnaces. They have a good system of weighing and distributing and I have never found their employees anything but courteous and obliging to customers. They have been 12 years in public service here, and I've dealt with them for years. "Do they do much feed business here?" inquired Paul as they rode away.

"Indeed, yes," answered Henry. "An enormous business! Their Premo Hog Meal; Marshall's 24% Protein for Dairy Cattle; "Success" feed for horses and mules, and "Edan" scratch feeds are splendid sellers for they give satisfaction."

"We must not fail to send our laundry out today," said Virginia, as they were leaving Wiloughby's office.

"Why not go over to the laundry?" asked uncle. "We have a few moments to spare. I want to show you just what the workings of a really modern and up-to-date laundry consist of, for we have a laundry here that we are mighty proud of."

Arriving at the works of the Madison Laundry and after meeting W. C. Evans and Mrs. L. P. Evans, the proprietors, they were shown through the plant and were much interested in the many machines that were laundering shirts and collars and family washing by the thousand.

"My what a lot of machinery they have here," remarked Virginia, as they stood watching the eight various machines, by which a shirt was finished.

"I should say yes," replied Henry. "Few people in Richmond realize the Madison Laundry is the model place you see it is. Nevertheless, they employ here a large number of hands, turn out thousands of pieces of work every day and have all the very latest machinery from the big Hercules at work ironers up to and including the dryer, you see over there by the wall. All their laundry is carefully and thoroughly washed, which is something I like, and they take such splendid care of ladies' waists and fine lingerie, that there is genuine pleasure in opening up a bundle of Madison Laundry—everything is there, properly laundered and not worn out."

"This is one of the best small town laundries I've ever been in," interrupted Virginia, "and do you notice what an exceptionally nice class of employees they have?"

"It's the most careful laundry in this part of Kentucky," replied Henry. "In light and ventilation they have done much to promote the health and welfare of their employees, which goes far toward turning out the high grade of work they are noted for."

"As you see, their laundry is absolutely sanitary, and is always open for inspection. In fact, they are anxious for the public to visit their laundry, where one can see that no injurious chemicals are used and where they have the latest machinery for all grades of work. They turn out rough dry washings—properly starched—a d family finish and flat work at a much less cost than a private laundress can do it and a point I especially like is, they are so careful in making small repairs. Mr. Evans has only had charge of the laundry for the past three months, but they are working hard for just one objective—Personal Service that Satisfies—and that will win success any time. They have done my work for a long time."

"Do you know, uncle," exclaimed Virginia, as they rode up Second street from the laundry "I think you have a wonderful little city here and I know we are going to like the people very much, but I had one regret in leaving Toronto. I was taking chiropractic adjustments and of course was obliged to give them up, and" sighing wistfully, "I was getting so much good from them."

"That's easy," replied Henry. "We'll run over and call on Mr. Edgar D. Porter, our D. C. here, 241 West Main street. I know you will like him."

While Virginia was engaged in conversation with Mr. Porter, who is a graduate of the Palmer School of Chiropractic, Paul remarked: "Tell me something about chiropractic, uncle Henry. I've been abroad so long, I don't know much about it."

"Well, my boy, it is a scientific method of adjusting the cause of disease without drugs or instruments, based on a correct knowledge of anatomy, and especially the nervous system. The chiropractic idea is that the cause of disease is in the person afflicted and the adjustment in correcting the wrong that is producing it. The function of every organ in the body is controlled by innate intelligence. Any impingement of these nerves, interfering with

Madison County Court. In the matter of the application for closing public road No. 69, between the Curtis pike and Hagan Mill pike:

Notice is hereby given to the public that Dennis Taylor has filed a petition in the Madison county court, in which he asks that the said court shall, by proper order close to public travel and discontinue Road No. 69, in Madison county. Said road is more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the center of the metal of the Curtis pike N 56 1-2 W 35 feet from the southwest corner of a wooden bridge; thence by calls and distances as of record in the County Road Engineer's office, a distance of 85-100 miles to the Hagan Mill pike, near the corner of T. J. Curt's Turner land. Said petition will be heard Monday, March 6th, 1922. J. G. BAXTER, 18 and 25 County Road Eng.

 the transmission of mental impulses results in an abnormal function called disease. This interference is produced by vertebrae being out of place causing a pressure upon the nerves as they pass from the spinal cord. The chiropractor is able to locate the point of obstruction or interference, and by means of adjusting the vertebrae, corrects the cause; and normal conditions of health is the result. Simple enough, is it not? It has also effected some wonderful cures with Rheumatism and their success with babies and children has been remarkable.

"Now while Virginia prepares for her adjustment, let us have Mr. Porter show us what a well appointed place he has."

"Why I had no idea that Richmond had such a chiropractic office as this," Paul remarked as they walked in the main reception room, while Virginia had the adjustment.

"Wonderful, what?"

"Indeed, it is," replied Henry. "But it all is necessary to Mr. Porter's wonderful practice. As you notice he has three private rest rooms which enables him to adjust a large number of patients without confusion. The spirit of service seems to be in the very atmosphere of this office, doesn't it?"

"How do you feel, Virginia?" he inquired, as she appeared.

"Oh fine," she replied. "I feel like one of those new women you read about. Are you boys ready?"

"Uncle Henry," said Virginia, as they left Mr. Porter, "you know I was very sorry to learn of Aunt Jennie's death for, while I had only met her a few times yet I had learned to love her very much. Where was she laid to rest?"

"Just out East Main in Richmond cemetery, and that reminds me, I have ordered a beautiful modern style monument for her grave and as it is only a short drive around, if you like, we'll run out there and see how much work has been done on it."

Arriving at the Madison Monumental Works, uncle introduced the young couple to Mr. Robert Golden and Mr. J. L. Matherly, the proprietors, who, at uncle's request, took them back into the works to see the monument intended as a lasting testimonial to the memory of Aunt Jennie. "Isn't it a beauty?" exclaimed Virginia, as they stood admiring the beautiful Barre granite block, which, being appropriately lettered, stood ready for delivery. "I like it very much, Mr. Golden," said uncle, "and I can see that you carried out my ideas of simplicity to the letter. When will it be erected?"

"Some day this week," replied he, "and as I suggested to you, I think we had better place it on a three-foot concrete foundation. Then it will last for all time to come. The expense will be quite moderate."

"I never thought of that, but it's a good idea, and I want it done right, so go ahead. I leave the matter entirely with you."

"Weren't they real jolly?" laughed Virginia as they rode away. "You certainly have some agreeable business men here in Richmond."

"Indeed we have," replied Henry, "and Golden and Matherly have a state-wide reputation for their splendid work. Their business was started in 1865 by W. F. Francis and in 1888 Mr. Golden started in to learn the trade. In 1897 he bought the business from A. D. Flora and five years ago he took Mr. Matherly in as partner. They furnished the beautiful monuments for the graves of Alexander Tribble, A. M. Swope at Stafford, Mr. Gillespie at Lancaster, and Riffe and Goady at Lexington, and in her will, Mrs. Elizabeth Irvine made special request that Mr. Golden furnish the monuments for Dr. Ephraim McDowell, Kentucky's greatest physician, and her father, Colonel David Irvine."

"Say, Uncle Henry," remarked Paul, "I've been using up gray matter for an hour or more trying to figure out that bee puzzle you gave us yesterday. Why is a beehive like a bad potato?"

"Why," laughingly replied the old man, "a beehive is a beeholder, isn't it? And a beeholder is a spectator, isn't it? And isn't a spec-tater a bad potato?"

"That will cost you four good cigars," laughed Paul, "for Virginia and I are too young to stand for a joke like that."

"Nevertheless," chuckled the old man, "I consider that a pretty good joke, and it's on you."

"Good," exclaimed Virginia, clapping her hands. "Did you get it, Paul?"

"Get what?" he inquired.

"Why, that's the answer to the 'single' puzzle Uncle Henry gave you yesterday morning."

"Well I'll be darned," he exclaimed, "and to think I didn't see it in the first place."

They entered the Glyndon that evening too tired and weary for words.

"Well, Virginia, we sure did some hustling today, didn't we?" inquired Uncle Henry as they walked upstairs to their floor.

"Indeed, we did uncle," replied she, "and honestly, I don't know how we are ever going to repay your loving kindness. It was so good of you and we met so many nice people here. One thing is certain," she firmly declared, going up to the old man and putting her arms around his neck, "when we get our house furnished the biggest, best and most comfy room of all is going to be yours for keeps. Good night, uncle, dear," and, kissing him, she whispered, "How could anyone help loving you?"

The old man gazed at her retreating figure as she walked slowly to her suite, then throwing back his shoulders as though he had discovered a new world, murmured:

"And I'm twenty years younger tonight with those kids loving me, if I'm a day; God bless 'em."

DR. CHAS. M'MURRAY LECTURES AT EASTERN

(From Eastern Progress)
 Dr. Chas. McMurray, head of the Department of Education, George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., spent the first week of the third term at Eastern, delivering a series of addresses to the faculty and the student body. Each day at chapel hour, from 4 to 5 in the afternoon and again in the evening from 7 to 8, Dr. McMurray discussed different phases of educational problems, conducted demonstration classes and emphasized the importance of the Training School in the life of a Normal School.

For a number of years, Dr. McMurray has been the recognized leader of elementary education in the United States. He is not only a leading Helbartian, but is the author of several books on methodology which have been looked upon as the last word in this kind of work. The purpose of having Dr. McMurray at Eastern is in line with the policy of the school in giving the students and the faculty the opportunity of coming in contact with the leaders of the different phases of education. In several of his lectures the theme of reorganizing and simplifying the elementary course was developed. He showed the growth of the present system of study and of the elementary course from the Three R's to its present overhauling enrichment. "It is true," said Dr. McMurray, "that we have in our present that have been added to our curriculum, and stated that fifty years ago our course of study consisted of the Three R's. Today it is pansophic. Dr. McMurray put the question like this: "Do you know enough about any one subject to teach it well? Is it possible for any one teacher to teach all of the branches thoroughly?"

In reference to the present course of study, Dr. McMurray stated that it is overflowing with enrichment, meaning the great number of courses that have crept into our schools during the last few years, such as Agriculture, Manual Training, Home Economics, Drawing, Bookkeeping, and many others of like nature. He is of the opinion that we should exert every effort to select a few topics in one subject and teach these well, rather than try to cover the entire ground.

"Every child in the country is entitled to the best that the culture of the world has delivered to us," he further stated. There is no reason why every teacher should not agree with this ideal. It is only too true, and it should be the idea of every one of us to develop these as much as we can. He further emphasized the fact that we should consider the vast field which our course covers and attempt to lay emphasis upon those most important facts. "Every great movement that takes place is drawn into the present overhauling enrichment. This point, Dr. McMurray related some of the recent courses
